Working Together for Young People

About the Charity

Education and Employers Taskforce

The Taskforce is a small independent charity launched in October 2009. Its vision is "that every school and college has an effective partnership with employers to provide young people with the inspiration, motivation, knowledge, skills and opportunities they need to help them achieve their potential and so secure our national prosperity."

Our Partnership Board brings together the country's leading education and employment organizations and Trustees are principally senior business leaders with an interest in education. The Taskforce has a team of seven staff.

We are committed to working with partners to make impactful and relevant employer engagement the norm across the educational experiences of young people. An underlying principle of the charity is that it does not charge schools or colleges for services provided to them. Similarly, it doesn't charge organisations that seek to offer their staff to volunteer.

Since our launch in October 2009 we have:

- brought together an unprecedented alliance of employers, education and government working together to make it considerably easier for partners, from the private, public and third sectors, to work together efficiently, effectively and strategically.
- produced the first comprehensive on-line guides for schools and for employers on working together: www.employers-guide.org / www.teachers-guide.org
- developed in partnership with the Times Education Supplement, Growing Ambitions, a unique online careers portal for teachers and their pupils with over 4000 resources from 40 organisations: www.growingambitions.tes.co.uk
- undertaken ground-breaking research into the impact and delivery of employer engagement in education, working with leading UK and international academics and researchers from Harvard to the OECD to make relevant and reliable evidence widely accessible to employers, schools and policy makers: www.educationandemployers.org/research
- ran Visit our Schools and Colleges week (October 2010), bringing CEOs into schools across the country, and fostering hundreds of new connections between schools and employers
- launched Speakers for Schools, turning Robert Peston's initial idea into a successful programme operating across England, Scotland and Wales, giving state schools and colleges access to more than 800 speakers of national prominence and supporting the programme's transition into a new independent charity: www.speakersforschools.org
- developed Inspiring the Future to connect employee volunteers with schools and colleges to talk about their jobs and careers in a wholly new way, working with a range of experts from government, education, employers and intermediaries and with special support from Deloitte and JP Morgan to design a programme which harnesses cutting edge technology to close the gap between the classroom and the workplace. Six months after its launch in July 2012, and thanks to a generous grant from Bank of America Merrill Lynch, over half of all secondary schools and over 4000 volunteers are already using www.inspiringthefuture.org.

Revolutionising how education and employers connect

What: Few doubt the importance of schools and employers working more closely together. Both sides are willing, but for too many, partnership has felt difficult. Inspiring the Future removes the barriers by making it free, easy and quick to get connected and involved. It begins with a simple ask to meet a profound need - first-hand career talks – one hour, once a year

Why: Disconnect exists between what young people aspire to and know about career options and labour market reality. This information gap must be closed to give all young people a decent start to working life and ensure a flow of talent underpins the UK economic growth. Demand is huge. Teachers want pupils to hear from apprentices, entrepreneurs, graduate trainees, CEOs - people from all walks of life.

Who: Six months after its national launch, half of the country's secondary schools and nearly 5,000 volunteers have registered. But we need more employers to encourage their staff to speak about their working lives in schools. No young person should make critical decisions at age 14, 16 or 18 without the chance of speaking to professionals working in the fields in which they are interested. Every school and college in Britain should be able to run its own annual careers fair, simply and cheaply. An army of 100,000 employee volunteers can make that happen.

How: Inspiring the Future uses cutting edge technology, designed in consultation with teachers and employers. It was developed pro bono by Deloitte software engineers with initial funding from JP Morgan and expansion has been made possible with a generous grant from Bank of America Merrill Lynch.

Supporters: Inspiring the Future is backed by all main national employer and education organisations and supported by leaders of three main political parties. Since its launch in July 2012, it has attracted interest from Italy, Spain, the US, Denmark, Japan and the OECD.
